Deletion of environmentally, historically important spaces within Loddington, Kettering.

Specifically I refer to Glebe Field, the green space south of Loddington Church.

This area of Greenland is important historically and environmentally. It preserves one of the few open spaces which provide a view of the 13th Century Church and also provides a historical right of way. This space holds numerous annual events which bring the village together.

Any further development of land in Loddington, if necessary (considering other villages such as Mawsley exist to serve expansion) should not be permitted here given its historical and community importance.

Residents have bought their homes in Loddington to enjoy such green spaces and views, not for additional development that take away from the quaint, British character that currently exists in the village.

Strongly against the proposal to remove protection and designation of ANY green spaces within Loddington which are currently historically and environmentally important.
